Santa, Tooth Fairy Quickly Come to Defense of Woman
Police say a Pennsylvania woman blamed her nonexistent twin sister for stealing sheets, an alarm clock, coffee pot, basket and hair dryer from a hotel room. The Beaver County Times reported Wednesday that police charged 31-year-old Jennifer Brown of Rochester with false reports and theft from the Holiday Inn in Big Beaver. Relatives confirmed Brown doesn't have a twin. (AP)

The Hills Are Alive With Many Off-Key Imitators
In one part of Austria, a particular sound of music will soon be heard again — yodeling. Along a new walking path in Vienna, hikers can press a knob, hear a recorded yodel in two-part harmony and try to imitate the call. Local yodeler and hotel owner Christian Eder came up with the idea and said Monday it is an attempt "to get people to loosen up a bit." (AP)

MARRIAGE
Husband's Job Lost on Wife
A Wisconsin woman drove her husband to the police station because he was annoying her, the La Crosse Tribune reported Monday. An officer was about to stop the black SUV for a burned-out headlight, when the woman pulled up to the La Crosse police headquarters to report her husband, Johnnie Bolds, was "talking stupidly." Bolds, 53, was arrested on two outstanding warrants. His wife received a warning for the headlight. (AP)

"We knew what it was, and we hoped we would never see it. It really is the proverbial superbug."

— DR. TARA PALMORE, DEPUTY EPIDEMIOLOGIST AT THE NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH CLINICAL CENTER, REFERRING TO THE DRUG-RESISTANT KLEBSIELLA PNEUMONIAE

"Genome sequencing and analysis is our best hope for ... outpacing the pathogenic evolution of infectious agents."

— DR. JULIE SEGRE, A GENETICIST WITH THE NATIONAL HUMAN GENOME RESEARCH INSTITUTE, WHO LED THE TEAM TASKED WITH FINDING A DEADLY SUPERBUG

NIH Thwarts Deadly Superbug Outbreak

Experts worked for months to kill germ that killed 6 and infected 18

Washington

Over six frightening months, a deadly germ untreatable by most antibiotics spread in the nation's leading research hospital. Soon, a patient a week was catching the bug. Scientists at the National Institutes of Health locked down patients, cleaned everything with bleach, even ripped out plumbing — and still the germ persisted.

By the end, 18 people harbored the dangerous germ, and six died of bloodstream infections from it. Five others made it through the outbreak only to die from diseases that brought them to NIH's world-famous campus in the first place.

It took gene detectives teasing apart the bacteria's DNA to solve the germ's wily spread, a CSI-like saga with lessons for hospitals everywhere as they struggle to contain the growing threat of superbugs.

The hospital staff was "horrified," said Tara Palmore, deputy hospital epidemiologist at the NIH Clinical Center. "We never want this to happen again."

It all stemmed from a single patient carrying a fairly new superbug known as KPC — Klebsiella pneumoniae that resists treatment by one of the last lines of defense, antibiotics called carbapenems.

On Wednesday, government researchers published an account of last year's outbreak, with advice: Fast sequencing of a germ's genome, its full DNA, may be essential. It can reveal how drug-resistant bacteria are spreading so that doctors can protect other patients.

"This is not an easy story to tell,"

About KPC

Normally, KPC, or Klebsiella pneumoniae, live in human intestines and don't harm people with healthy immune systems. But the multidrug-resistant strain has emerged over the past decade to become a fast-growing threat in intensive care units, spreading easily between very ill people and killing half of those it sickens. Worse, people can carry KPC without symptoms unless the germs slip into the urinary tract or bloodstream — theirs or the person's in the next bed — through a catheter or surgical wound. (AP) said Dr. Julie Segre, a senior investigator at NIH's National Human Genome Research Institute. She led the genetic sleuthing that found the bug hiding in sink drains and, most chilling, even in a ventilator that had been cleaned with bleach.

The outbreak now is over, the last carrier found in December. Infection-control specialists at other hospitals called the detailed description, published in the journal Science Translational Medicine, important to share.

"They were able to demonstrate that this sneaky little bug was able to stay alive and get transmitted in ways they hadn't quite predicted," said Dr. Sara Cosgrove, associate hospital epidemiologist at Johns Hopkins University.

Infections at health-care facilities claim an estimated 99,000 lives a year. Bacterial sequencing is becoming fast and cheap enough for most large hospitals to use during tough outbreaks, but another lesson is how to guard against these bugs in the first place.

"There's better technology ... to prevent these bacteria from spreading, and this is what you should expect from your hospital," said Dr. Lance Peterson, microbiology and infectious disease director at NorthShore University HealthSystem in Evanston, Ill.

LAURAN NEERGAARD (AP)

Now What?

The outbreak provides a case study of the dangers of hospital-bred bacteria. NIH now tests every patient for superbugs, tests every ICU patient twice a week and screens every patient in the facility monthly for antibiotic-resistant bacteria. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

CBO Warns of Recession in 2013

Washington

A new recession is likely if a stalemate over tax and spending cuts continues between Democrats and Republicans, according to dire projections by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office.

In its annual summertime report, the budget office said Wednesday that letting decade-old tax cuts expire and sweeping spending cuts occur in January — which will happen without congressional action — “would lead to economic conditions in 2013 that will probably be considered a recession.”

If that happened, the economy would contract by 0.5 percent — a gloomier projection than the budget

Backstory

The Congressional Budget

Office's latest warning came amid an election year in which neither President Barack Obama nor congressional Republicans have shown signs of giving ground in their protracted battle over taxes, spending and the budget. Obama wants to renew expiring tax cuts for everyone except individuals earning more than $200,000 and couples who bring in above $250,000. Republicans are demanding that all tax cuts be extended. (AP) office made earlier this year when it envisioned slight growth under that scenario. Unemployment would rise to around 9 percent by late next year if the standoff persists, the analysts said, with budget office director Douglas Elmendorf telling reporters that failing to resolve it would cost 2 million jobs.

“I think the stakes of fiscal policy are very high right now,” Elmendorf said at a briefing, adding, “We have very serious budget challenges and very serious economic challenges in this country.”

According to the report, letting the tax cuts continue and preventing the spending cuts from taking effect would leave a deficit next year of a little more than $1 trillion. If the reverse occurs, the shortfall would be $641 billion — in effect sucking roughly $400 billion out of a U.S. economy that is already struggling. ALAN FRAM (AP)

Afghans Blame Spies for Attacks

Answers sought as insider assaults on NATO forces rise

Kabul, Afghanistan

The Afghan government blamed foreign spy agencies for a rising number of killings where government soldiers and policemen have gunned down their international partners, and it ordered stricter vetting of recruits and screening of those in the 350,000-member Afghan security force.

The U.S. had no information suggesting that the insider attacks were the work of foreign intelligence services, a U.S. defense official said. Instead, he said attacks typically are carried out by Afghans acting alone, though some might have had help from insurgents.

Afghan President Hamid Karzai called a meeting to discuss cases where members of the Afghan security forces or militants wearing their uniforms have turned their weapons on foreign troops.

So far this year, there have been 32 insider attacks against coalition forces, resulting in 40 deaths, according to the NATO military alliance. That's up from 21 attacks for all of 2011, with 35 killed.

"The reports ... blamed the infiltration by foreign spy agencies into

A Push to Protect

U.S. officials have expressed deep concern about insider attacks on troops in Afghanistan. Here's a look at some prevention efforts:

- U.S. commanders began assigning "guardian angels" — troops who watch over comrades in interactions with Afghan forces and even as they sleep.
- The U.S. now allows Americans to carry weapons in several Afghan ministries and started evaluating visits to Afghan government offices.
- This month, U.S. officials ordered U.S. troops to carry loaded weapons at all times in Afghanistan. (AP) Afghan security force ranks as responsible for the rise in the individual shootings," Karzai spokesman Aimal Faizi said.

Faizi said the foreign agencies were trying to undermine confidence in the Afghan forces. He declined to name any country.

In the past, intelligence agencies in neighboring Iran and Pakistan have been accused of enabling Afghan insurgents to destabilize the country.

The U.S.-led coalition has said only about 10 percent of the attacks were related to infiltration by the Taliban, but that analysis was prior to the latest spate of seven attacks in 11 days. DEB RIECHMANN (AP)

Farmers Kill 48 In Land Dispute

Mombasa, Kenya

Hundreds of farmers attacked a village, killing at least 48 people in southeastern Kenya in an escalation of ongoing clashes between the farming and pastoral communities over land and resources, an official said Wednesday.

Some people were burned to death in their houses, while others were hacked to death or shot with arrows, police said.

The majority of those killed were women and children, said resident Said Mgeni. He said the attacks began Wednesday at dawn when a group of about 200 people raided a village in the Riketa area and torched all the houses. (AP)

Syrian Crisis Stirs Up Lebanon

Beirut

The Syrian civil war has spilled over into Lebanon, bringing with it sectarian street clashes, mob violence and general government paralysis in Beirut.

The bloodshed in Syria has drawn Lebanon deeper into the unrest — a troubling sign for a country that has gone through its own 15-year civil war and has an explosive sectarian mix as well as deep divisions between pro- and anti-Syrian factions.

Meanwhile ...

Syria regime forces shelled two Damascus districts Wednesday before troops swept through to carry out house-to-house raids, killing at least 35 suspected rebels in a major flare-up of fighting in the Syrian capital, activists said. (AP)

The chaos could give fighters in Lebanon more leeway to establish supply lines to Syrian rebels fighting to oust President Bashar Assad.

Fighting in the northern Lebanon city of Tripoli continued Wednesday after two days of clashes between pro- and anti-Assad groups killed at least six people and wounded more than 70.

The arrest earlier this month of a former Lebanese official and prominent supporter of Assad has suggested the conflict may be causing Lebanon to slip further from Damascus. Still, analysts say that Assad still has the tools and the allies he needs to stir up trouble in Lebanon. (AP)

Greece Cracking Down On Illegal Immigrants

As economy sours, officials work to seal border with Turkey

Nea Vyssa, Greece

Border police jeeps hurtle along hot, dusty tracks past potato fields on their way to the river that marks the Greek-Turkish border. Sirens blaring, the convoys have been repelling wave after wave of migrants.

Greece's remote Evros region has turned into Europe's main battleground against illegal immigration; more than two-thirds of people sneaking into the EU pass through here from Turkey.

Greece began an aggressive campaign this month to try to seal its 130-mile northeastern border, as it faces a financial crisis that has caused a swell in joblessness and a surge in racist attacks.

Afghans currently make up the highest number of people crossing illegally, followed by Pakistanis, Bangladeshis and an increasing number of people from war-ravaged Syria, according to the European Union's border protection agency, Frontex.

"I know what will happen to me: They might keep me in detention ... but then they'll let me out and I'll go to Athens."

— ANWAR, A 22-YEAR-OLD ILLEGAL IMMIGRANT FROM BANGLADESH, WHO SAID HE WANTS TO TURN HIMSELF IN TO GREEK POLICE TO GET CLOSER TO ATHENS

The police operation has added nearly 2,000 border guards to the Turkish frontier previously manned by about 500 officers.

In the first week of the crack-down, police in Athens said they detained nearly 7,000 people; nearly 1,700 were slated for deportation. The effort has faced criticism from rights groups and officials over alleged racial profiling. (AP)

Pumping Up France's Economy

France will cut gasoline taxes to ease the price crunch on French consumers, Prime Minister Jean-Marc Ayrault said Wednesday, as the Socialist-led government attempts to quell rising concerns about the country's sluggish economy. Details of the gasoline tax cut should come next week, officials said. Gasoline currently costs about $8 a gallon in Paris. (AP)

Romney's Nightmare Scenario

Mitt Romney wanted to preside over a made-for-TV gathering showcasing his economic credentials and GOP unity at the Republican convention. Instead, he heads to Tampa with the national debate focused on rape and abortion and with the divisions within his party — and between him and running mate Paul Ryan — on display.

"It's a huge distraction," Saul Anuzis, a Republican National Committee member from Michigan, said of the quarreling touched off by Missouri Rep. Todd Akin this week. "We should be talking about the economy and here we are consumed by these side issues."

Even the weather is threatening to spoil Romney's party. As Wednesday's rain pounded the area where the convention is scheduled for next week, Anuzis acknowledged that Tropical Storm Isaac "could cause havoc."

All this as a new Associated Press-GfK poll showed a neck-and-neck race between Romney and President Barack Obama.

Romney and Ryan sought to gain ground Wednesday with fresh criticism of Obama and with a new TV ad. But GOP troubles persisted, just as the party had seemed to be moving past its deep divisions.

The ticket found itself still overshadowed by Akin's refusal to drop out of his Senate race after causing a stir by saying women's bodies can prevent pregnancy in cases of "legitimate rape." He has apologized, but he also has bucked calls from Republicans — including Romney and Ryan — to abandon his bid.

"It's bad timing. Akin happening now sort of amplifies the

Akin Stands Firm Despite Ryan's Push

Vice presidential contender Paul Ryan on Wednesday acknowledged he urged Missouri Rep. Todd Akin, right, to abandon his Senate bid over Akin's controversial rape comments, but said he has no further plans to speak to him about it. Akin said he would not end his campaign. Ryan also defended a bill he co-sponsored in the House to ban federal funding for abortion except in cases of incest and "forcible" rape. That language, which was changed, would have narrowed the exception for rape victims. Akin and 225 other members of the House, including 11 Democrats, co-sponsored the bill. (AP) whole thing," GOP strategist Charlie Black said, referring to distractions from the campaign's economic message.

But Black and others predicted that the national conversation will shift back to the economy — and an unemployment rate above 8 percent — by the time Romney accepts the nomination Aug. 30, and certainly by this fall.

The amount of registered voters who said they planned to back Mitt Romney and Paul Ryan in November, a new AP-GfK poll shows, while 46 percent favor President Barack Obama and Vice President Joe Biden. That's not much of a change from June, when the split was 47 percent for Obama, 44 percent for Romney. (AP)

"I can't imagine Obama running ads in suburban Pennsylvania in October tying Mitt Romney to Todd Akin," Black said. "If he does, it means we're winning."

For now, as final preparations were being made for the four-day convention, Akin's comments have caused a furor in the Republican Party. The debate has highlighted fissures within the GOP over when abortion should be legal.

Romney's campaign rejected the idea that the Akin issue was overshadowing the party's effort to stir enthusiasm in its base membership. But there were other issues threatening the convention.

The RNC's platform committee has adopted budget language similar to Ryan's House federal spending blueprint, which calls for turning Medicare into a voucher system — another divisive issue.

And Democrats were making plans to try to steal some of Romney's limelight next week. Obama is set to campaign in Iowa, Colorado and Virginia. Vice President Joe Biden is planning to campaign in Florida — including in Tampa — next week, and Michelle Obama will appear on David Letterman's show on Aug. 29, the third day of the convention. THOMAS BEAUMONT (AP)

When It Rains ...

Four years ago, Hurricane Gustav threatened Republican National Convention plans. This year, it could be Hurricane Isaac. All Isaac — which was a tropical storm on Wednesday — needs to do is come close to Tampa to bring a lot of problems to the GOP convention, which begins Monday. Even during an average summer thunderstorm in this area, major roads can flood. Forecasters expect it will become a hurricane Thursday. Some models predict a path that could run through Florida next week, but forecasters won't know for a few days. They also said Isaac could miss the state.

Two Sides of Nats, Metro Debate

Team could pony up to cover late games, but at a very high cost

Washington

We've covered the issue of late Nats games and WMATA's Metrorail system a few times in these parts, but people can't get enough.

I wrote extensively about the issue in June, explaining that Metro cannot stay open for an extra hour of service without a contract and a $29,500 deposit from the Nats.

Dr. Gridlock then covered Monday night's situation, when the Nats and Braves started about an hour late because of rain and ended well after midnight because of a 13-inning marathon.

By Dan Steinberg

The long and short of it is that there are no current plans for the Nats to pay to keep Metro open later for regular-season games.

Now, you can argue this thing in at least a couple ways. On the one hand, the Nats have encouraged fans to use Metro for years — nationals.com/waytogo says Metro is "the way to go to the ballgame." They're now baseball's best team, with a whole bunch of meaningful home games on tap in September and October.

If another rain and/or extra-innings situation comes up with the division title or best record in the National League on the line, do you really want thousands of fans streaming for the exits? Do you really want a first-ever play-off berth clinched in front of a tiny crowd, with frustrated fans already on trains home?

On the other hand, what would the threshold be for determining a game worth paying the $29,500? After July 1? With a record above .500? Any qualification would be arbitrary, and the Nats might then feel forced to keep Metro open for any late game, at any point in the season. That could be quite costly and might benefit an extremely small number of people.

Official Response

Asked about Monday night's game, which left fans stranded at Metro, a Nationals spokesman sent this statement:

"With 81 home games every season, the Nationals appreciate the effort it takes our fans to travel to and from the ballpark. That's why we make every effort to encourage fans to consider all options when traveling to Nationals Park, as listed on nationals.com/waytogo. Additionally, we will continue to make announcements during the game and broadcast reminders on the video board about Metro closing times so that fans can make appropriate arrangements for leaving the ballpark. We hope everyone made it home safely." (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Report: CSX Train Not Speeding

Officials would not speculate on cause of fatal derailment

Ellicott City, Md.

A coal train that derailed in Maryland was going the authorized speed of 25 miles per hour with an engineer-in-training at the controls before the accident that killed two young women, a federal investigator said Wednesday.

Investigators were checking videos, track conditions and maintenance records to learn whether the college students sitting on a railroad bridge over Ellicott City's main street contributed to the Monday night crash or if their presence was just a tragic coincidence.

National Transportation Safety Board investigator Jim Southworth wouldn't speculate on the cause of the derailment.

"This is just not the time for any kind of analysis," he said Wednesday. "This is purely fact-finding."

So far, Howard County police have said that Elizabeth Nass and Rose Mayr, both 19, were sitting on one side of the bridge with their backs to the tracks as the train passed a few feet behind them; their bodies were found buried under coal dumped from the train cars.

Investigators have also said

Officials inspect the derailment along a parking lot in Ellicott City, Md.

the train's emergency brakes were applied automatically — not by the three-man crew — around midnight Monday, but they don't know why part of the train jumped the tracks.

Southworth said the train's two locomotives did not derail and that the crew reported they "felt nothing, and they saw nothing before emergency braking occurred on their train."

This is at least the third derailment involving a CSX Corp. train in Maryland this month, though the two others did not involve fatalities. Cumberland police reported a three-car derailment on another train in Cumberland the same night as the Ellicott City wreck. The other was in Woodstock on Aug. 8, according to Howard County authorities. (AP)

Auto Theft Charges Tied To Fatal Police Crash

Prince George's County police have charged a man with auto theft in connection with a pursuit that led to the death of a county officer. Police say Kenneth Mitchell, 25, of D.C. was an occupant of a car that two officers were chasing on Interstate 95 in Beltsville, Md., on Monday afternoon. The officers' car ran off the highway and crashed into a ditch, killing Adrian Morris, 23. Police also said Wednesday that they are issuing a warrant for the arrest of the second occupant, Kevon Neal, 23, of Fort Washington. (AP)

Smart Meters Come to D.C. Taxis

Washington

"Smart meters" are now a reality: At least two cabs in one major D.C. fleet now have the city-mandated credit-card-ready systems installed and ready for the streets.

City officials showed off the new $35 million VeriFone system at a news conference Wednesday, and the rider interface will look familiar to anyone who's taken a New York City taxi ride in the past decade: There's a credit-card reader and keypad and an LCD display to show maps, weather, NBC-branded news clips and plenty of advertisements.

Mayor Vincent Gray, a Democrat, tried out the system Wednesday. But there are a few reasons you might not see a smart meter for weeks, if not months. First off, the meters are scarce for now. Only 150 will be provided for installation over the next two weeks, said city taxi czar Ron Linton. At the garage Gray visited Wednesday, home of the fleet run by taxi giant Jerry Schaeffer, they only have five systems ready for installation.

And then there's all the legal and political machinations. Gray continued his war of words with D.C. Council member Marion Barry, D-Ward 8, whose disapproval resolution on the meter contract has complicated the rollout.

But it isn't Barry's resolution that matters, it's the protests of the VeriFone award filed with the Contract Appeals Board.

Those protests carry the small but real possibility that the VeriFone contract could be voided altogether, delaying the smart meter system for months.

Man Indicted On 3 Charges in Guard Shooting

Washington

A grand jury has indicted a Virginia man accused of shooting and wounding a security guard in the arm at the Washington headquarters of a conservative lobbying group.

Floyd Corkins, 28, was indicted Wednesday on a federal charge of interstate transportation of a firearm and ammunition and two District of Columbia offenses: assault with intent to kill while armed and possession of a handgun during a violent crime.

Charging documents say the man was carrying a handgun, a box of ammunition and 15 Chick-fil-A sandwiches when he fired on the security guard at the Family Research Council's headquarters. It wasn't immediately clear why Corkins had the chicken sandwiches. (AP)

Pierre Garçon

The new No. 1 option is Pierre Garçon, whom the Redskins welcomed with a five-year, $42.5 million contract during free agency. He has developed a quick rapport with Griffin that was evident throughout training camp and in the first two preseason games. "We've still got a long way to go, but it's started off on the right foot," Garçon said.

Who Will Catch On?

The audition to become one of rookie quarterback Robert Griffin III's regular-season targets has turned into quite a show, featuring a diverse cast of characters trying to stand out on coach Mike Shanahan's stage. A decent case can be made for as many as nine of the wide receivers vying to make the 53-man roster when the final cuts are made next week, with some jobs more secure than others. The pool is so deep that Shanahan moved promising youngster Niles Paul to tight end. Here are the Redskins' options. JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

Santana Moss

Moving to the slot is Moss, whose six-year run as Washington's top yardage receiver ended last year. Rather than concede he is starting to fade at age 33, he dropped 15 pounds and seems revitalized, figuring to benefit from Griffin's mobility.

Joshua Morgan

Morgan signed on the same day as Garçon, getting a contract worth $12 million over the first two years, but he has been forced to play catch-up after straining his left hamstring during training camp. He figures to be more in the mix Saturday when the D.C. native makes his home preseason debut against the Indianapolis Colts.

Anthony Armstrong

Armstrong had a breakout year in 2010, but he caught only seven passes last year, and his position has become tenuous. He has kept his sense of humor while wearing a noncontact jersey — which he wore until Tuesday since hurting his right shoulder Aug. 2 — saying he was getting practice at being "extra-elusive."

Brandon Banks

The 5-foot-7 Banks is trying to prove he is more than just a big-play return man. He ran back a punt 91 yards for a touchdown against the Bears, but he needs to contribute as a receiver as well. Banks has only two catches in preseason. "When a guy has game-breaking potential and ability ... it is tough not to keep a guy like that," Shanahan said.

Leonard Hankerson

Second-year wideout Leonard Hankerson, who looked ready to blossom last year when he had a 106-yard game against the Miami Dolphins, looks like a safe bet for the roster. He hurt his right hip in that game against Miami and was done for the season, but he is fully recovered and has too much potential to ignore.

Dezmon Briscoe

Briscoe is trying to get back on his feet after conditioning and off-field troubles got him cut by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers last month. Briscoe had three catches and a touchdown Saturday.

Aldrick Robinson

Robinson can return kicks and has had a good preseason so far (eight catches, 132 yards) after spending most of last year on the practice squad.

Terrence Austin

The third-year wideout is another bubble player who helped himself by throwing a key block on Banks' punt return last weekend against the Bears. Austin is a reminder that versatility can help in determining that final roster spot.

No. 14

The Redskins' NFL rank last season in receiving yards. The team combined for 4,058 yards.

2-14

The record that ESPN The Magazine predicts the Redskins will finish with this year.

The two victories come against St. Louis and Minnesota, which would mean they would not win a single divisional game, according to the magazine. Washington went 5-11 last year, including two victories over the Super Bowl champion New York Giants. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Nats manager gives new details about ace's shutdown plan

The Nationals

Davey Johnson settled in for his daily meeting with reporters Wednesday and wasted no time bringing up the topic foremost in everyone's mind. "Well, any more ideas of how to get [Stephen] Strasburg pitching in October?" Johnson asked. "I seem to be getting more and more help on that aspect."

Johnson is not on Twitter, but through letters and text messages he has received ample plans to extend Strasburg despite his innings limit, expected to be between 160 and 180. His favorite suggested Johnson trip the Nationals' ace when he's in the outfield so Strasburg strains a hamstring.

"I wish we could get by the Stras thing," Johnson said.

He knows that is not an option, even after Strasburg pitched six shutout, 10-strikeout innings Tuesday against the Braves. Johnson revealed that he expects Strasburg to most likely miss two starts at the end of the season, as well as the entirety of the playoffs. It's likely his last start will come Sept 19.

"I think it came with the off-days, we need a starter for another two starts," Johnson said. "I think it's two starts. It might be three."

Despite Johnson's assertion, general manager Mike Rizzo reiterated the Nationals do not yet have a specific target. He also offered a reminder it will be him, not Johnson, who makes the call. "When I see with my eyes that he's had enough, he'll have enough," Rizzo said.

Rizzo has consistently repeated — as he did Wednesday — that Strasburg has no set innings limit, and that Strasburg's shutdown will come when the appropriate signs suggest it is time. Johnson was asked if the Nationals really had decided on a firmer schedule.

"It depends on how many innings I let him pitch leading up to it," Johnson said. "He's been averaging right around six innings. You guys should be able to do the math."

Strasburg, who has thrown 145⅓ innings this year, has ignored the talk of his innings limit, saying no team official has given him specifics. Johnson said Strasburg eventually will be told when he will be shut down. (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Design Outside the Box

Condos that aren't cookie-cutter inspire owners to employ creative design ideas

Decor

If you walked into Alex Infingardi and Miguel Martins' condo, your first reaction might be, "Whoa."

Rather than stepping into the kind of Victorian foyer you'd expect to find in a home less than a mile from the U.S. Capitol, you are instead greeted by the underside of an industrial metal staircase.

The staircase leads up to a second floor without any walls or railings to divide it from the main space. Everything on the upper floor — the office on one end and sleeping area on the other — looks out over the family room and dining area below.

"You're pretty much almost floating when you go to sleep," Infingardi says.

Washington may be known for stuffy rowhouses and anonymous apartment blocks, but behind some staid facades lie surprising spaces that are anything but cookie-cutter.

Whether it's the nooks and crannies of a historic home or a sharply angled room in an ultra-modern high-rise, unusual layouts can be a challenge when it comes to interior design. Those same quirks can inspire owners to get creative, unlocking unique design opportunities you won't find in right-angled abodes.

In Infingardi and Martins' 1,100-square-foot condo, the open loft posed a challenge, so Infingardi, an interior designer, employed a few tricks of the trade.

He chose to place the foot of the bed near the back wall, with the headboard serving as a partial railing to create a cozier, more private "room," Infingardi says.

"You're pretty much almost floating when you go to sleep."

— ALEX INFINGARDI, WHOSE BED PERCHES AT THE EDGE OF AN OPEN LOFT ABOVE THE LIVING ROOM IN HIS DUPLEX

The desk on the opposite end of the upstairs space is also placed along the open edge, providing a view of the home and windows.

Infingardi says that safety is not a concern in his railing-less loft. He can put a hand on the ceiling for balance if he needs it — it's tall enough to stand under and yet low enough to reach.

With such a wide-open design, Infingardi played with paint colors to create the feeling of different rooms. One end of the first floor is painted a deep red to mark off the dining area, and the other end is charcoal gray to set out the family room.

"Accent walls help separate spaces," he says.

Infingardi and Martins' home is one of 18 units in the Telephone Company Condominiums (629 Constitution Ave. NE; 202-543-2272, Atlasprop.us), which was built in 1906 for Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone and then converted to condos in 1985. High ceilings allowed 16 units to be

'Mommie Dearest,' This Time With Pills

No matter how bad you think your mother is, Violet Weston will make you appreciate her more. Violet (played by Rena Cherry Brown, left) is the protagonist of "August: Osage County," a Pulitzer Prize-winning play that explores just how screwed up mother-daughter relationships can be. Violet's drug addiction and her family's dark secrets come to a head at a tragic, impromptu reunion filled with self-deception, grudges and illicit activity. Might as well bring Mom along.

Paul and Storm, above, write funny songs that come in many forms. There's no genre or topic off-limits for these two, but they do specialize in nerdy subjects. Take, for example, their songs about "Star Wars" ("Holiday Greetings from Jabba the Hutt"), "Game of Thrones" ("Write Like the Wind (George R. R. Martin)") and "Frogger" ("Frogger! The Frogger Musical"). Nerd alert! In a good way.

Mayan creation myth holds that two great beings once sat together and thought the world into existence. Twenty-five artists from local troupe EMP were charged with responding to Latin American creation myths from Eduardo Galeano's historical narrative, "Memoria del Fuego." Though she certainly has done well for herself since becoming America's first Idol, Kelly Clarkson could have packed it in after cutting 2004's "Since U Been Gone" and had her legacy in the can. As They Like It

See Washington through the unjaded eyes of sightseers

Now that summer is nearly over and the tourists are gone, we can have our city back. They'll return home with memories of god-awful humidity and the sights they've seen — some of which most D.C. natives never have. Whatever has kept you away, maybe it's time to take a trip to some of the places only tourists usually visit. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Visit Some Celebs

Famous people around here are kind of ... well, we don't want to say "boring," but it takes a real wonk's wonk to get jazzed about spotting Rhode Island Rep. David Cicilline. But at the Madame Tussauds wax museum, you can cuddle up to creepily lifelike statues of famous people who are objectively cool, such as Rihanna and J.Lo, below. There are legit "D.C. famous" people there, too: This location of the worldwide attraction has figures of all 43 presidents, so you can throw your arm around Thomas Jefferson and sit next to Abraham Lincoln in a replica of his box at Ford's Theatre, which is not at all morbid. And don't miss wax versions of local celebs Marion Barry, J. Edgar Hoover and Bob Woodward, which probably all play cards after the place closes. Madame Tussauds, 1001 F St. NW; special online $16 rate for Md., Va. and D.C. residents; 202-942-7300, Madametussaudsdc.com (Metro Center)

SCOTT SUCHMAN

See 'Shear Madness'

A lot of history has happened in D.C.'s theaters. Second only to Lincoln's assassination is "Shear Madness" (a 2008 production is pictured), which is the second-longest-running play in American theater history (the show's Boston production is No. 1). "Shear Madness" has been running here for nearly 20 years, making it as much a part of D.C. culture as khaki pants. Set in a salon, it's a partially improvised comedy about a murder, and the audience votes nightly on who the real murderer is, which totally makes up for not having a vote in Congress. Kennedy Center, 2700 F St. NW; $48; 202-467-4600, Kennedy-center.org. (Foggy Bottom)

Explore DC. For more local attractions you haven't made it to yet, download Explore D.C., the Post's new iPhone app. You'll find tons of information on all the stuff you thought you knew about, plus coupons and a neat feature that shows you the closest cup of coffee to where you are RIGHT NOW.

See Congress in Action

Watch Congress do what it does, live! Which is pretty much just as exciting as watching C-SPAN in your living room, except to tour the House or Senate galleries you have to put on pants. (You also have to call your senator or representative to get passes.) D.C. residents can contact Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton and then bitterly stomp around the gallery in a sullen funk. If Congress is not in session, you can use your pass to see the empty gallery, which sounds disappointing — except with this Congress, about the same amount of legislative work will be getting done. East Capitol and 1st streets NE; free, 202-226-8000, Visitthecapitol.gov. Go Inside the Washington Monument (Or Not)

They say you don't know what you've got till it's rattled by a random earthquake. And if you, like most Washingtonians, put off venturing to the majestic top of the Washington Monument, you're out of luck for a couple of years. If you'd still like a bird's-eye view (well, a low-flying bird's view) of the city, you can go up into the tower of the Old Post Office Pavilion, above. It's free and quick: Ride up nine floors in a glass elevator, then in another small elevator (or up 130 steps), and you're on top of Pennsylvania Avenue. 1100 Pennsylvania Ave. NW; free; 202-289-4224, Oldpostofficedc.com (Federal Triangle)

Shop for Souvenirs

Could your home use some hometown tchotchke pride? Honest Abe's Souvenir Shop is your source for D.C. license plates with your kids' names on them (so they can initiate "taxation without representation" discussions as they bike with pals). The adjacent Washington Welcome Center welcomes your purchase of tiny presidential busts and patriotic wall hangings that really tie a room together. Honest Abe's Souvenir Shop, 1000 F St. NW, 202-783-0505, Honestabessouvenir.com; Washington Welcome Center, 1005 E St. NW, 202-347-6609, Washington.org. Go to the Theatre

Yes, Ford's Theatre is where Lincoln got shot. But it also has a rich history unrelated to presidential death. Tour the theater, museum, education center and the Petersen House, where Lincoln died. There, you can board a reproduction of the train car that carried his coffin and see a re-creation of the barn where assassin John Wilkes Booth died. (The real spot is now a median on Route 301 in Virginia, a trip for another day.) Ford's Theatre, 511 10th St. NW; $3.50-$15.25; 202-426-6924, Fordstheatre.org. (Metro Center)

Questioning Authority

Barbara Kruger wraps heady ideas into a new show at the Hirshhorn

Exhibits

“Whose body?” “Who is beyond the law?” “When was the last time you laughed?” Those are among the questions posed in “Belief+Doubt,” Barbara Kruger’s new installation at the Hirshhorn Museum.

Kruger has explored issues of power, commercialism and resistance through her large-scale text works since the early ’80s. “Belief+Doubt,” which will be in place through 2014, expands on these themes, brashly enveloping the museum’s lower-level lobby with vinyl panels printed with words in red, white and black. The exhibit stretches into the newly relocated gift shop, which has been peppered with phrases including “You want it, you buy it, you forget it.”

Ahead of the show’s opening this week, the bicoastal artist discussed her work and what drew her to the Hirshhorn.

Conceptual artist Barbara Kruger’s new piece “Belief+Doubt” will remain installed on the Hirshhorn’s lower floor through 2014.

What special challenges did the Hirshhorn’s space present for your installation design?

I’ve always thought the building was really interesting. And the space is just terrific for me. It offers the kind of advantages that “I’ve always had a short attention span. My work engages that sort of viewing.”

I really like when I’m trying to figure out a work. It has an aerial view, which is cool. You can look at it from various sight lines. It has those escalators, which offer a diagonal, which you don’t get that often.

Your art is somewhat rooted in the graphic work you did for magazines as a designer at Condé Nast in the ’60s. Has your outlook changed with the decline of print and the rise of the Internet?

I’ve always had a short attention span. My work engages that sort of viewing. And I’ve always worked with direct address, and much of online life is direct address. So, the Web suits me fine. I’m not nostalgic for the good old days.

On Sept. 12, you’ll be responding to people’s queries about the installation via Twitter. Yet your work is known for posing questions, not providing answers. But I am interested in conversation, and Twitter is a conversive form. I rarely do public presentations anymore, but I have a full-time teaching job at UCLA. A good 12 hours a week last quarter was spent in classrooms engaging students. It’s not like I teach at a school where I go in once a month and say, “Make that green.”

National Museum of Health and Medicine

WHERE ANATOMY IS GROSS IN BOTH SENSES OF THE WORD

A not-sad consequence of modern medicine is that there are fewer disease-mangled tissue samples for pathologists to study. That’s one reason this museum’s collection is so valuable: Bloated, gnarled legs from elephantiasis victims are hard to come by these days.

The collection got started in 1862, when the surgeon general ordered Army medical officers to send in specimens from Civil War battlefields, and the Department of Defense-run museum’s heritage is evident in the many bullet-pierced bones on view.

A touch screen outside the employees-only tissue library lets you examine hidden treasures such as the bones of Ham, the first chimp in space, and the brain of Charles Guiteau, who assassinated 20th president James Garfield. On the Lincoln front, there’s the bullet that killed him, bone shards from his skull and some other morbid souvenirs. The jars of stuff preserved in fluid — conjoined infants, a foot from a leprosy victim, etc. — will ensure you never consider pickling as a hobby again.

Did You Know?

» The National Museum of Health and Medicine does not, and never did, possess the manhood of Depression-era gangster John Dillinger. That is an urban legend.

» The museum once had in its custody a few bits of Benito Mussolini’s brain; these were returned to the dictator’s widow in 1966 and are said to reside atop his tomb in Italy.

» Dr. Mary Walker, whose field surgical kit from the Civil War is on view, was the first woman to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor. That didn’t earn her the respect it should have: An advocate of dress reform, she was arrested several times for wearing men’s clothing.

COMEDIAN, COMPLAINER

Stand-up comedian Kyle Kinane has a singular pursuit in life: fun. "The time that I have on this earth should just be filled with good times," he says. The Illinois native's 2010 album, "Death of the Party," features self-deprecating stories about a lifetime of un-fun, dead-end jobs. Having recently filmed a Comedy Central special, Kinane is in town for a weekend of gigs at the DC Improv.

You've had some career success of late. Does that make your job easier?

Success has actually made it harder because my act was bitching about having a job and being poor. And now, because I did well at bitching about being poor, I'm not really poor anymore. I'm not rich, but I'm not deciding between beer and dinner.

You're 35. Are you trying to shake the man-child image?

A little bit, but I'm not trying to grow up. I now get to have the life I wanted when I was 18 years old. Now, I'm like, "I can buy any skateboard I want."

You've spent much of 2012 on the road.

There's miserable parts to this career. Sometimes you get a club where they just wanna sell drinks. The audience got in with free tickets, they don't care that a show's going on. And bachelorette parties: Stay away! If you want to be the center of attention, don't go to the place where they start the evening with "Everyone please be quiet." COURTESY ARENA STAGE

Kathleen Turner plays the title role in "Red Hot Patriot: The Kick-Ass Wit of Molly Ivins," now at Arena Stage.

'Molly Ivins' Has Something to Say

A trailblazing columnist inspires twin sisters to pen a one-woman tribute

Stage

It took two brains to bring columnist Molly Ivins back to life.

Ivins, who died of breast cancer in 2007 at age 62, is the subject of "Red Hot Patriot: The Kick-Ass Wit of Molly Ivins," a one-woman show opening Thursday at Arena Stage. Kathleen Turner stars as the outspoken Texan, who was known for her liberal politics, quick wit and a syndicated column that brought her blunt style to a national audience.

"The day she died, I called my twin sister and said, 'We have to write a one-woman show,'" Margaret Engel says. "She instantly got it and said, 'Yes, we have to.'"

Margaret Engel

Sibling rivalry doesn't exist when Engel works on a project with her sister, Allison. "We are real writing partners," Engel says. "Before the Internet, we did three books together. This was a lot easier. Being identical twins, we have shorthand, and we don't have to preface every critical comment

Quotable

"I should confess that I've always been more of an observer than a participant in Texas Womanhood ... You can't be 6 feet tall and cute, both. I think I was first named captain of the basketball team when I was 4, and that's what I've been ever since."

— MOLLY IVINS

with three sentences leading up to it. We can cut to the chase."

Engel didn't know Ivins personally (they had met on occasion), but she felt that Ivins needed to be memorialized, both for who she was and what she brought to the country.

"We owe a special debt to the women who came before us in journalism, because they had a rougher time than we did," Engel says. (Engel was previously a reporter and editor at The Washington Post.) For the country as a whole, Ivins was "really another Mark Twain. She's funny and insightful and spot-on about showing America's foibles and triumphs."

"She wrote in bare feet and brought her dogs into the [New York Times] newsroom."

Ivins was well aware that her personality and writing style wouldn't fit in everywhere. "She once said her tombstone should say, 'She never made a shrewd career choice,'" Engel says. "She really cared about her writing and her message more than the luxuries of writing for big-time media outlets."

Though Ivins briefly worked at the New York Times, her freewheeling style often got her in hot water with her editors. She went back to Texas, where her column was eventually carried by more than 400 newspapers nationally. "She could have made it work at the New York Times, but her personality didn't fit," Engel says. "That's the Old Gray Lady, and she wrote in bare feet and brought her dogs into the newsroom."

Unearthing 'Treasures'

Taj Mahal digs up groovy tracks from the vaults and heads out on the road with legend Al Green

Music

Taj Mahal's song "You Ain't No Streetwalker, Honey but I Do Love the Way You Strut Your Stuff" opens with a curious bit of studio chatter, as the man born Henry St. Clair Fredericks Jr. explains to his backing band how to play the groove. He sounds out how the rhythms should begin ("dup-day dup-day dup-day"), how they should evolve ("boo-lay boo-lay boo-lay"), and how they should resolve (untranscribable).

"It's all in there, man," he concludes. The band dutifully heeds his instructions and pounds out a gritty jam.

It's a telling moment on the new rarities compilation "The Hidden Treasures of Taj Mahal 1969-1973," which collects live versions and alternate studio takes that had remained shelved for four decades. "Streetwalker" shows the exacting nature of Taj Mahal's music, which mixes American blues and rock with Caribbean influences.

Taj Mahal, 70, has always been a perfectionist with extraordinarily high standards, which made him one of the most revered young blues musicians in the 1960s and 1970s, first as a founding member of the group the Rising Sons (which featured Ry Cooder) and later as a solo artist who performed with the Rolling Stones, Al Kooper and members of the Band, among others.

The songs on "Hidden Treasures" didn't meet those standards when Taj

"I put out so much stuff that continues to go down the road with me. I'm never really looking for tunes."

— TAJ MAHAL, ON HIS EXTENSIVE BACK-CATALOG OF SONGS

Mahal recorded them. "Originally, I thought I had better takes," he says. "A lot of years went by, and I put my ears on it again, and there were some very nice pieces there. I changed my mind."

The studio was never a natural or comfortable environment for Taj Mahal. "I've always been a live artist," he says. Most of these tracks were recorded live in the studio, with all their dup-day and boo-lay intact.

The second disc features a full 1970 concert at the Royal Albert Hall in London, where Taj Mahal opened for Santana. Forty-two years later, he remains a hard-touring musician, on the road most of the year. Several of the songs on "Hidden Treasures," such as the Bob Dylan cover "I Pity the Poor Immigrant," may make it onto his current set list, but his catalog is so vast that he can switch it up from one show to the next.

"I put out so much stuff that continues to go down the road with me," he says. "I'm never really looking for tunes."

Holding On To Rare Gems

Al Green muses on rap music, recording and Obama's spin on a classic

Music

If there was any doubt about the staying power of Al Green's 1971 single "Let's Stay Together," it vanished when President Barack Obama crooned a snippet of the song at a fundraiser in January.

Green, who was Obama's opening act that night, never saw the president's impromptu performance coming.

"We were all shocked," Green says. "I wish he'd sang the whole song. He sounded better than me!"

It sparked a surge in downloads of "Let's Stay Together." Sales increased 490 percent in the week following the fundraiser, according to Billboard.

As shocked as he was, Green is accustomed to having other artists interpret his work. Before Obama, Tina Turner covered "Let's Stay Together," and Talking Heads' version of "Take Me to the River" is as famous as the original. Green, 66, is also no stranger to sampling: His music has been used in countless hip-hop and R&B songs.

Green, an ordained pastor, says he usually listens to a song before signing off on a sample, but with some rap songs, he has a hard time understanding the appeal. "I don't mean to slap rap music in the face," Green says, "but I really am from the old school."

Recently, Green's teenager asked him if a particular song reflected reality.

"He said, 'Hey Dad, is that real? The guy with all the money in his hand and "I don't mean to slap rap music in the face, but I really am from the old school."

— AL GREEN, ON HIS MIXED FEELINGS ABOUT HAVING HIS MUSIC SAMPLED IN HIP-HOP SONGS

a Jack Daniels in the other hand and all the girls in the shorts in the club?" Green recalls. "I said, 'If you don't have money and you don't have the Jack Daniels, the girls will be gone.'"

Green doesn't reject hip-hop wholesale. His last studio album, 2008's "Lay It Down," was co-produced by Ahmir "Questlove" Thompson and James Poysner, both members of the Roots. It was his highest-charting album in 35 years. As a result, he hit the road hard, which is why it's taken so long for a follow-up.

Green has recorded a few songs for his next record but probably won't log any serious studio time until October. From there, things could take a while.

"I like to live with the song," Green says. "I like to sleep with the song. I like to caress the song. I like to hug the song — well, I don't want to go too far, but I like to know the song. You got to get to know the song before you can really talk about doing something with it."

Age Against the Machine

In 'Robot & Frank,' an elderly man makes a connection with his automated caregiver

Screen

Jake Schreier, for one, welcomes our robot overlords. Kind of.

In the director's new movie, "Robot & Frank," Frank Langella stars as a former cat burglar who's struggling with a common problem: He's getting older, he's having difficulty taking care of himself, and his kids are worried about him, but he doesn't want to leave his house.

"It definitely is a movie about how, when you get old, people stop treating you like a person," Schreier says. "They talk to you like a child, but you don't feel any different. So the question underneath that was, could an inanimate object be a better friend for you? It would almost be less patronizing."

The object in the film, which opens Friday, is a high-tech robot that specializes in healthy food, exercise and mental stimulation. Frank tries to convince his Roomba-on-steroids that their activities should include plotting and executing heists on the wealthy neighbors.

The original script, written by Christopher Ford, set the action 50 years in the future. "We didn't have the budget to support 50 years in the future," Schreier says. "So we suggest it's 10 or 20 years in the future, but we never wanted to be on record as it being this year."

"The robot is programmed against [Frank] in this very nefarious way. It's not WALL-E."

— JAKE SCHREIER, DIRECTOR OF "ROBOT & FRANK"

The relationship between Frank and his robot evolves to the point where Frank feels real emotion, but Schreier was careful not to suggest the robot feels anything in return.

The robot "has a manipulation engine — he's trying to get Frank to exercise, to eat better," he says. "The robot is programmed against him in this very nefarious way. It's not WALL-E. The robot is just a series of reasoning, but Frank loves him and that means their relationship is real."

The one-sided relationship mirrors the way the film was shot. The robot is voiced by Peter Sarsgaard, but hidden inside the robo-suit is a woman named Dana Morgan.

"It was so hot when we were filming this thing, and that suit is a nightmare," Schreier says, so it proved impossible to keep Morgan in the suit for shots in which the robot didn't appear. That meant Langella sometimes had to act into nothingness.

"It didn't matter," Schreier says. "He says, 'I just had something in my mind that I put in there for the robot.' And he still won't tell me what it is." KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

Pedal Pushers

"PREMIUM RUSH," out Friday, stars Joseph Gordon-Levitt as a bike messenger who picks up a package and adventure ensues! Because you know what always brings adventure? Bikes. For proof, keep reading. K.P.K.

1 "Pee-Wee's Big Adventure" (1985)

Most of the titular adventure involves the Bowtied Wonder searching for his beloved bike, which is supposedly hiding in the basement of the Alamo. Ask about it the next time you tour the Texas landmark — we're sure the guides aren't sick of that question yet.

2 "E.T." (1982)

The classic scene of the two-wheeled escape convinced children of the '80s that with just enough heart and a big enough ramp, they could reach the moon. Instead, they mostly just racked up huge ER bills.

3 "The 40-Year-Old Virgin" (2005)

His lack of a car signals that Steve Carell's character just isn't ready to grow up and be an adult. Well, that and the video games. And the toys. And the lack of emotional maturity.

4 "The Wizard of Oz" (1939)

In a film that's largely about walking, the frame story's villainess prefers to pedal. Miss Gulch is after Toto and is willing to bike in a long skirt to get him.

5 "The Muppet Movie" (1979)

In this CGI-filled world, it's hard to communicate the gasp that went through theaters in 1979 when Kermit rode a bike. KERMIT. WITH LEGS. Will wonders never cease?

summer screens

WRITTEN BY EXPRESS' LORI MCCUE

Gil (Owen Wilson) and Inez (Rachel McAdams) share a romantic moment in "Midnight in Paris."

Splendor in the Grass

We like movies, we like live music, we like spending the remaining summer nights outdoors. We really like when all of those things come together for a good cause. The Comcast Outdoor Film Festival returns for its 16th year, kicking off Thursday with "All the President's Men" and music by Luke Brindley, continuing Friday with Woody Allen's "Midnight in Paris" and music by Gypsy Moth Trio, and ending Saturday with "We Bought a Zoo" and music by Christylez Bacon. There also will be food trucks aplenty that will donate a percentage of their profits to National Institute of Health children's charities. Bring a lawn chair or blanket and hold on to summer just a little bit longer. ▶ Mid-Pike Plaza, 11810 Rockville Pike; Thu.-Sat., music starts at 5:30, movie starts at 8:30, free; 301-816-6958, Filmfestnih.org.

Not Just Newtons

The fig deserves a little sympathy.

Though beloved by Mediterraneans of all stripes, it's known to many Americans only as the dried filling of a certain chewy, mass-produced cookie. In fact, the fig is a moist, sweet fruit with a delicate texture that grows well in mild climates such as ours — a fact appreciated by Thomas Jefferson, a fig aficionado who imported several varieties from France and grew them at his Virginia home. Nevertheless, they're surprisingly difficult to find in grocery stores and farmers markets around the region. Donna Taylor, operations manager at Ticonderoga Farms in Chantilly, Va. — which is holding its second annual Fig Lovers Feast on Sept. 8 — spoke to us about the fruit and the event it inspired. AMANDA ABRAMS (FOR EXPRESS)

How did the Fig Lovers Feast come about?

Some people had asked us about our figs and the trees and history, so we did our first Fig Lovers Feast last year. It included a hayride to the orchard [to see the trees in full fruit] and a wine tasting. A local restaurant made fig pizzas, and a woman made ice cream that included sauce from figs. This year, there'll be another hayride and a tasting of fig dishes.

Fresh figs are relatively rare in stores around here. Are they hard to grow commercially?

Well, Peter [Knop], the farm's owner, is determined. He experimented with different areas on the farm over 25 years and was eventually able to get them to commercial quantities. Ticonderoga has over 540 fig trees and about 14 different varieties, including Champagne, Golden Delicious, Brown Turkey and Maltese. The groves went nuts this year. Because there was no massive frost, some of the figs from our first harvest were huge, and now a second batch is coming in.

Who are your customers?

We get chefs from Loudoun County, Prince William County, Pennsylvania, even [chef Patrick O'Connell] from the Inn at Little Washington. They like to [use figs in] their weekend dishes. We have our general public, too, including people who've become accustomed to fresh figs from Costco. But those are fast-processed; they were frozen first. People get used to them, then they come and taste a real fig — not processed, not frozen. It's a big difference.

COURTESY FOOD, WINE & CO.

Food, Wine & Co.'s roasted fig and white peach salad

Fig Flavors Closer to Home

Food, Wine & Co. (7272 Wisconsin Ave., Bethesda; 301-652-8008) is serving a Mediterranean-themed salad featuring roasted figs, white peaches, blue cheese, olive oil and apricot jam ($10).

Restaurant Nora (2132 Florida Ave. NW; 202-462-5143) is offering figs in two different preparations. An appetizer features the fruit steeped in balsamic vinegar and then bruleed, accompanied by melon, prosciutto, arugula and pecorino ($16). The tasting menu ($78) includes a dessert of roasted figs, paired with vanilla ice cream and an almond cookie.

Poste's (555 8th St. NW; 202-783-6060) small plates menu includes a dish of caramelized figs paired with a foie gras-topped brioche and pickled grapes ($17).

Roscoe's Pizzeria (7040 Carroll Ave., Takoma Park, Md.; 301-920-0804) offers a seasonal sweet-and-savory pizza topped with figs, mozzarella and Gorgonzola cheeses, arugula, honey and olive oil ($15). A.A.

What does a ripe fig taste like?

When you get the perfect fig, it's very sweet, very decadent and unusual. They're almost like wine: You'll have your variety that's dry and sweet, another that's juicy and sweet, another that's dry with a tart-ish flavor. Brown Turkeys are darker inside, Maltese are pale pink.

If You Go: Ticonderoga Farms doesn't allow visitors to pick figs, because it's tricky to determine whether the fruit is ripe, but you can buy them at the farm market.

What are some ways to cook or bake with figs?

I've seen chefs do all kinds of things: pizzas, a lot of sauces, cheese mixtures, chocolate mixtures. You might make a chocolate cake but with fig jam inside, rather than raspberry. People might mix them with orange or lemon zest, or thyme and basil. Chef Lou [Patierno, of the restaurants Girasole in The Plains, Va., and Panino in Manassas, Va. (Girasole-panino.com)], who will be cooking for the Fig Lovers Feast, is thinking about doing a grilled salmon dish with a fig sauce, maybe with a spinach salad and blue cheese, and another cheese with figs. And we want to do a chocolate fountain with figs this year.

Meat in a Box's
kabobs

Whole Package

There's a certain reaction

I usually get when I talk about the restaurant and takeout place in Falls Church called Meat in a Box (312 S. Washington St., 703-533-9070).

There's the sly grin. The throat-clearing. The awkward giggle. And the obvious questions: "Does it have anything to do with the 'SNL' song of, um, a similar name?" and "Do they really serve meat in a box?"

By Katie

"A lot of people ask me" those questions, says good-humored Nadia Shahgoli, who, with her husband, opened Meat in a Box three years ago. "They think we're either crazy or brilliant. The name has nothing to do with 'SNL.'" The owners simply thought "Meat in a Box" was a fun, attention-grabbing name for their Persian eatery, which serves well-seasoned skewers of beef and chicken, along with garlicky hummus and other specialties. Much of the food is, as promised, served in cardboard boxes.

Meat in a Box has an unlikely standout: homemade saffron and rosewater-infused ice cream ($4). The custardy, pale-yellow ice cream, served between wafers, is delicate, floral and refreshing, and it reminds me of old-fashioned violet "pastilles" candies. (My husband seems to agree, noting, "It tastes like a grandparent's house. In a good way!") That nostalgic, subtle flavor is ironic in a place with such a bold, literal moniker. But the dessert fits right in: It comes in a box.

Read Katie's column every other week here and at Expressnightout.com.

Mayfair & Pine co-owners, chefs and couple Emily Sprissler and Jason Cote took inspiration for their Glover Park gastropub from London and San Francisco.

A Gastropub For All Ages

A husband-wife team serves comfort food at Mayfair & Pine

Mayfair & Pine was hatched as a family-friendly destination, which is why the restaurant sticks toast in its bread basket. Toast is what chef Emily Sprissler and her young son eat together at home in the morning, and crisp, buttered bread is what kids seem to choose over, say, "rosemary foccacia," jokes the Season 2 "Top Chef" contestant.

Her kitchen co-pilot is Jason Cote, who happens to be her husband. The couple's new gastropub in Glover Park takes its name from a district of London, where they spent their honeymoon, and the street they called home when they cooked in San Francisco. Their short menu blends memories from the two cities, plus a few comforts. Fish and chips? Check. Cioppino? Accounted for. Also on the list are scrambled eggs and buttery mushrooms, heaped on a cushion of (take a guess) toast.

The best-sellers thus far, reports Sprissler: Fish and chips, shepherd's pie and the Thanksgiving sandwich. "Even in this heat," Sprissler says, "stuffing and turkey and mashed potatoes hit the spot."

An encounter with the shepherd's pie made more of an impression on my eyes than on my tongue; a small Mason jar displays the layering of bland ground lamb, potatoes and peas. The lamb burger, gray but juicy, requires two hands to hoist and comes with big fries cooked here. Crisp seared rockfish teeters on a loose bed of carrots, sliced potatoes and citrus segments for an entree that's nothing special.

But the attention from the staff can be. Ask for Elijah, one of the sunniest servers around.

My favorite food memory is one of Mayfair & Pine's simplest dishes. Boston lettuce arranged with thinly sliced candied apple rings and diced jicama is both pretty and refreshing. The sweet heat of the fruit might taste familiar; the apple picks up some fire from a simple syrup infused with cinnamon candy.

Going against the restaurant trend, the tables at the modestly dressed Mayfair & Pine are covered, paper atop cloth. "I like linens," says Sprissler, who notes that she had children in mind when she added the extra layer of protection: "They can draw and spill."

Bee Movie

JEROEN EISINGA

YEP, THAT'S A GUY COVERED IN BEES. Artist Jeroen Eisinga's work "Springtime 2009-2011" at the Hirshhorn is a film in which Eisinga gets covered in 250,000 bees. A quarter of a million BEES. With their legs and wings and buzzing and, oh yes, their stingers. All over his face and nose and body and ACK, SERIOUSLY THE BEES.

tures a newly commissioned series of portraits centered on the majestic burial horses of Arlington National Cemetery, through Oct. 28. "Richard Diebenkorn: The Ocean Park Series," it was when he worked along the shoreline of Southern California that the American artist made the leap from figurative work to the abstract art for which he is known. This exhibition of paintings, drawings and prints, completed from 1967-1988, is named for that community where Diebenkorn found inspiration and includes more than 80 pieces, through Sept. 23. "Take It to the Bridge," includes temporary exhibitions, performances, installations, and interventions on the Performance Bridge inside the Corcoran's glass entryway. Many of the events take place on Free Summer Saturdays, through Sept. 15. "The Deep Element: Photography at the Beach," get your ocean views without all the pesky sand at this exhibition of photos from the late 19th century to today, through Oct. 14. 500 17th St. NW; 202-639-1700, Corcoran.org.

Fairfax Art League: "An Architecture of Dreams," recent dreams by Ian Frank explore personal dreams and subliminal experiences, through Sept. 5. Old Town Hall, 3999 University Dr., Fairfax; 703-273-2377, Fairfaxartleague.net.

Hirshhorn Museum and Sculpture Garden:

"Ai Weiwei: Circle of Animals/Zodiac Heads," recently imprisoned for speaking out against the Chinese government and now facing bail restrictions, Chinese artist Ai Weiwei isn't likely to leave that country in the immediate future. His artwork, however, will travel – the provocative artist's installation of 12 zodiac-inspired animal heads is on display in the Hirshhorn Sculpture Garden, "Barbara Kruger: Belief + Doubt," the entire museum space – walls, floor, escalator sides – will be wrapped in text-printed vinyl by the artist, immersing visitors in a hall of voices that address conflicting perceptions of democracy, power and belief, "Black Box: Jeroen Eisinga," the museum series presents a diverse program of recent work by established and emerging artists from around the world, including Dutch artist Eisinga, who filmed himself covered in bees, through Oct. 31. "Dark Matters," the museum reopens an exhibit that explores the literal and metaphorical notions of darkness, "Directions: Antonio Rovaldi," through a body of work ranging from video and performance to drawing and sculpture, Rovaldi often explores how the metaphor of distance is represented in art, through Nov. 30. Seventh Street and Independence Avenue SW; 202-633-1000, Hirshhorn.si.edu.

International Arts & Artists'

Hillyer Art Space: "Fresh Perspective: An Exhibition of Local College Artists," a small survey of work done by local students who craft honest, expressive responses to the world they carefully observe and choose to live in. Curated by Judy Southerland, through Aug. 31. Felicia Glidden, in her sculpture, video and sound work, the artist is looking for pathways into the unknown and the invisible; the place on the edge of awareness, the unspoken and sometimes unknown motivations for action. By mining her dream journals from the past 25 years, she weaves together threads of recurring themes; water, roads, and movement, through Aug. 31. 9 Hillyer Ct. NW; 202-338-0680, Artsandartists.org.

Koshland Science Museum: Ongoing exhibits: Visitors can try their hands at lowering CO2 emissions in the Earth Lab; learn about health and the brain

Mexican Cultural Institute: "Hina/Jaina: On the Threshold of the Mayan Underworld (600-900 A.D.)," more than 50 "Jaina style" figurines depict various aspects of Mayan cosmology, through Sept. 22. Ongoing exhibits: a collection of objects from Mexico's cultural past and present, 2829 16th St. NW; 202-728-1628, lcm.sre.gob.mx/imw.

Mount Vernon: "Hoecakes & Hospitality: Cooking With Martha Washington," 3200 Mount Vernon Memorial Hwy., Alexandria; 703-780-2000, Mountvernon.org.

National Air and Space Museum: "Fly Marines! The Centennial of Marine Corps Aviation: 1912-2012," this exhibition of paintings and photographs, on loan from the National Museum of the Marine Corps, honors the branch's legacy as a supplier of air support for U.S. troops over a 100-year period, from World War I through Afghanistan and Iraq. Ongoing exhibits: explore the evolution of flight, with displays, hands-on exhibitions and historic aircraft and spacecraft, from the Wright Brothers plane to Charles Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis to the Apollo 11 command module Columbia. The museum also has a planetarium and IMAX theater, which for a fee shows educational films on flight and outer space, Sixth Street and Independence Avenue SW; 202-633-1000, Nasm.si.edu.

The open loft in Alex Infingardi's duplex creates some spatial challenges. He created privacy in the "bedroom," above, by facing the headboard toward the living room.

reborn as two-level lofts and two others as single-story condos.

On the other side of Capitol Hill, Brandon Gregoire lives in another unusual space, also in a historic building. Gregoire happened upon the Lovejoy Lofts (440 12th St. NE; 202-543-2272, Atlasprop.us) in 2004 when the former school building was being converted into a 54-unit condominium. Three days later, he put an offer on an attic apartment.

One step inside tells you why.

White-painted wooden support beams run from floor to ceiling with diagonal branches reaching left and right. They form a border around the entire apartment.

Hunting

How to Find Your Own Weird Space

Want a condo with character? Here are some tips to get you started on your search:

- ▶ Check out repurposed old buildings such as churches and schools. Attic units tend to offer interesting angles.
- ▶ Find buildings in blocks that are cut into funky angles because of diagonal streets. Some buildings mirror the shape of the block.

▶ Look at the architecture of buildings. Is one curved on the outside? Good chance, it's curved on the inside, too. T.K.

"The beams turn some people off and some people on," says Gregoire, who loves them. In addition to their look, "they help break the apartment into different zones."

While he did the majority of the decorating himself, Gregoire brought in interior designer Tracy Morris to help with the tough stuff. "The main challenge was the ceiling pitches," Morris says.

Because the unit was once an attic, the ceiling slants down sharply, creating unusual angles where it hits the walls.

"Most homes have a break where the ceiling starts and the wall ends," she says, but the lines aren't clear-cut in this place.

So Morris painted both the walls and the ceiling a neutral color. "Some designers prefer a sharp edge," she says. "I just like it to blend in so that the place looks bigger."

In Gregoire's home, exposed bricks play the role of accent walls. A triangular red brick wall grounds the family room and frames a window that offers fabulous views of the Capitol building at night.

When Gregoire bought the unit, it was a one-bedroom/one-bathroom with a ladder leading up to an open storage nook, but he had grander ideas.

He added a spiral staircase and moved the bedroom upstairs. Now his first floor also has a den, and his upstairs is an elegant bedroom under a sloped ceiling and a skylight.

Even newly designed buildings have units with funky shapes.

Karen Kalicka is an interior designer with clients in Turnberry Tower (1881 N. Nash St., Arlington; 703-243-3000, Turnberrytowerarlington.com) — a luxury condominium located near the Rosslyn Metro station.

The building is shaped like an ellipse, so many rooms have an angled wall of windows that form the outer curve.

"The beams turn some people off and some people on."

— BRANDON GREGOIRE, WHOSE CONDO, FORMERLY THE ATTIC OF A SCHOOL BUILDING, IS FRINGED BY WOODEN SUPPORT BEAMS

Finding area rugs for these spaces can be a challenge, Kalicka says. The rugs either need to be smaller than the floor and set away from that wall, or "cut to mirror the shape of the room," she says.

Also, most bedrooms in the building do not have perfect right angles — opposing walls are often different lengths. Kalicka says that furniture placement in a room like this is key. If you put the bed's headboard along the shorter wall, it could make the room feel claustrophobic. "It's like an optical illusion," she says. A better choice would be to place the headboard on the longer wall.

If you can get past the challenges, there are some definite benefits, Kalicka says. "Angles add softness. They open things up, and they certainly add interest."

After all, who wouldn't want to live in a condo that makes visitors say, "Whoa."

On the Rise

This graph shows the percent change in condo prices, month-over-the-year, in the Washington metro area. Prices have been up every month since March. (TWP)

SOURCES: GUM CENTER FOR REGIONAL ANALYSIS, METROPOLITAN REGIONAL INFORMATION SYSTEMS

A Comeback For Condos

Recent data show a robust market, but how long will it last?

Outlook

News about the Washington area condo market has been encouraging in recent weeks.

Following the housing bust, the condo market languished, primarily because of the difficulty faced by would-be condo buyers in getting a loan.

A report released by Delta Associates showed that in the first half of 2012, condo sales were up, inventories were down, and a shortage of condos in the region was predicted.

While the condo market has looked much healthier in recent months, we are unlikely to see a major price surge regionwide, even with the dwindling supply.

Condo sales picked up appreciably in the first seven months of 2012. Sales have climbed steadily since January, and 2012 summer condo sales totals are at the highest levels since 2007.

With the rise in sales came declines in inventories, which led to price growth. Condo prices have been up every month since March.

Several other factors suggest that while the condo market will continue to stabilize, the recovery will start to look more modest.

Thousands of new rental units are set to become available over the next few months. Rents will drop — or at least stop rising so fast — and renting will be comparatively more attractive.

But the primary risk to the condo market is the same uncertainty in the overall housing market — a softening of demand as the pace of job growth in the region slows.

$310K

The average price of a condo in the Washington metro area in July, nearly 9 percent higher than the same time last year. (TWP)

For the past three years, workers have flocked to the D.C. region because our economy was growing when other regions were not.

The Washington area continues to attract new people, but it is now competing with other regions that have stronger local economies and are adding jobs faster than we are. As a result, the pool of potential homebuyers — in particular young potential condo buyers — will also grow more slowly.

The Twin Spin

In promos for "Abby & Brittany," premiering Tuesday on TLC at 10 p.m., I saw what appears to be a young woman with two heads, riding a bicycle.

At first, I thought this was a spoof. In fact, the "docu-series" follows real, conjoined twins, who have separate heads, lungs and hearts but share a body. Is the show exploitative? Educational? Inspirational?

For guidance, I turned to Alice Dreger, professor of medical humanities at Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine and author of "One of Us: Conjoined Twins and the Future of Normal." Yes, it's exploitative in a way, Dreger says. The twins put themselves on display; the viewer is a voyeur.

Then again, the twins consented to the series, helped shape it and are being paid. "That's cool," Dreger says.

If you tune in, you'll find Abby and Brittany are remarkably normal. They eat fondue, shop, celebrate their 22nd birthday. "They refuse to be objects of pity," Dreger says. "They are shameless in the positive sense — without shame. And that helps everyone." How can anyone be embarrassed by a physical defect after watching these intrepid twins, who draw inevitable stares, yet go out and about, living ordinary lives?

Dazed and Confusing

Dax Shepard vehicle 'Hit and Run' offers a messy collision of comedy and action

Film Review

"Hit and Run" might be a middling romantic comedy, if it weren't for those pesky chase scenes. Or it could be a decent action movie, if only the engine-revving weren't derailed by the intermittent saccharine schmoopiness. Instead, it feels like writer, co-director and star Dax Shepard has unleashed some kind of freakish Franken-film on moviegoers.

Hit and Run (R)

- Directors: David Palmer and Dax Shepard
- Stars: Dax Shepard, Kristen Bell, Bradley Cooper and Tom Arnold
- In a Nutshell: Former getaway driver Charlie Bronson jeopardizes his Witness Protection Plan identity in order to help his girlfriend get to Los Angeles.

Mixing up incongruous elements can work, of course; there's a reason peanut butter and jelly are a lunch-time staple. But "Hit and Run" feels so lazily thrown together.

Shepard plays Charlie Bronson, a bedraggled, drawling man under witness protection, who lives in the middle of nowhere with his professor girlfriend, Annie (real-life fiancée Kristen Bell). While Annie has no ambitions for a better job, as that would mean leaving her marooned boyfriend, her boss insists she interview for a dream position in Los Angeles. The only kink is that LA is the hometown of the criminals who have it out for Charlie.

But devoted boyfriend that he is, Charlie breaks out his souped-up Lincoln Continental and chauffeurs his girlfriend to her interview and toward a potentially life-threatening scenario. Hot on their heels are Randy (Tom Arnold) — the trigger-happy numskull charged with protecting Charlie — and Annie's vengeful ex, Gil, played by Michael Rosenbaum. Also entering the mix are the bank robbers Charlie has been evading for four years, including Alex (a dreadlocked Bradley Cooper) and Neve (Joy Bryant).

In terms of humor, the punch

Backstory

Friend Benefits

Dax Shepard got his real-life fiancée, Kristen Bell, and best friend, Bradley Cooper, above, to co-star in "Hit and Run" as a way to get the film made quickly. "It was just easier to get my friends [together] for a short time," he told ESPN.com. (EXPRESS) lines often feel either uninspired or distasteful. On the less offensive end of the spectrum, the gags include an orgy with what appears to be octogenarians and a bumbling, coffee-stained Arnold.

The chemistry between Shepard and Bell should have been a snap, given that the pair are actually together. But their scenes were some of the most problematic. There's no wit and no passion and certainly no indication that the relationship can survive outside the vacuum of Nowhere, U.S.A.

Then again, there's only so much an actor can do with lifeless dialogue. It's hard to blame the cast for looking less than committed; they all realized too late that Shepard created a monster. STEPHANIE MERRY (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Rookie Blue Andy (Missy Peregrin, left) and Nick investigate a death threat against a priest and find themselves in the middle of a drug war. A young drug runner's refusal to turn informant leads Traci to make a major career decision. Chris and Swarek argue over what makes a good cop.

BURN NOTICE

Straight, No Chaser

USA
9:00

When "Burn Notice" began, it had some of the whimsy pioneered by the USA shows "Psych" and "Monk." It was more tongue-in-cheek than cloak-and-dagger. Tonight's sixth-season finale (which features Bruce Campbell, left, and Jeffrey Donovan, right) has plenty of shootouts and explosions, but it's not that much fun. This show is just too preposterous to take seriously, but pointless when it's played straight. (UNIVERSAL UCLICK)

“Wow. If she were looking for a way to get people to stop talking about the fact that she urinates on Zac Efron in their upcoming film, that will do it!”

“That’s a great deal if you’re looking to score some sorrel, but these Uber partnerships are getting out of control. What’s next — complimentary juice boxes on rides to DCPS schools? Half-off trips to your mom’s house before major holidays?”

— WILL SOMMER AT WASHINGTON CITYPAPER.COM/BLOGS/CITYDESK remarks on the luxury cab service’s new deal with the Petworth farmers market, which offers half-price rides to and from the market for the rest of the season.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF MAYOR VINCENT GRAY

“I don’t know who that statue is but it’s not Chuck Brown. He never dressed like that. Where is the trademark Hat, sunglasses and suit?”

— COMMENTER RECALLTHEMALL AT WASHINGTONPOST.COM’S DISTRICT OF DEBONIS blog reacts to preliminary renderings of what will become an area known as Chuck Brown Park in Northeast, per a declaration by the mayor. The statue design has not yet been finalized. The late musician’s 76th birthday would have been Wednesday.

Blog Log

“Apparently I’ve successfully built a paper moat around myself in my office ... as reminders and to keep monster away.”

— @WEBJOURNALIST is apparently drowning in work.

“You gotta love Metta for being the sport Ron Artest never would have been, embracing Toodee after he/she/it finished with a disappointing silver. Way to be, Metta. Thanks Yo Gabba Gabba!, for always knowing how to twitch our nerves so uncomfortably.”

— JORDAN RABINOWITZ AT SPORTSGRID.COM describes the Los Angeles Lakers forward’s appearance on “Yo Gabba Gabba!” in which he won gold in the Yo Gabbalympics. Artest changed his name to Metta World Peace in 2011.

NATIONAL INSTITUTE OF MENTAL HEALTH RESEARCH STUDY

Are You Depressed?

For more information contact 301-435-8982

NIH researchers seek depressed persons ages 18-55 to enroll in a research study evaluating the changes in brain chemistry that may cause depression. You may qualify if you are currently depressed. A psychiatrist from our research team will determine your eligibility based on your symptoms and history.

Research participation includes:

- 2 outpatient visits of six hours each, and
- 10-15 outpatient visits of one hour each, over 2-3 months
- treatment with one of 3 standard antidepressants
- two brain scans (PET)

Research is conducted at the NIH Clinical Center in Bethesda, MD. There is no cost to participate and compensation is provided. Travel may be reimbursed. After study completion participants receive short-term follow-up care while transitioning back to their own provider, or are referred to a mental health professional.

Horoscope

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You may not agree with those who think the timing is right to start a project. You're thinking in another week or so.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You may only be applying guesswork to a complicated situation, but because your instincts are keen, you'll be guessing correctly!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You know how to make the best of a situation today. Give what you can to someone else who is in need of a little extra; you won't run out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) The plans you make are likely to come to fruition only after successful negotiations with a tough competitor.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You won't be lying in a bed of roses today; things are likely to challenge you. A friend surprises you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Progress is swift, but you may not achieve everything you had set your mind to until you overcome a particular obstacle.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Teamwork is expected to work wonders, but you may not get the results you expect. You'll know what is wrong.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You may discover, to your horror, that things are not as ready for you as you had hoped. You're going to have to do some more prep work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The messages you receive today are steering you in the right direction, but soon the time will come when you must go it alone for a while.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You are eager to capture something that may be out of reach for much longer. Don't let frustration shape your decisions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You can guide someone away from a dangerous situation today and put them on a path toward personal enlightenment.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You may realize that what you've been after really isn't for you. A change of heart leads to a change of plans.

Today in History

1775 Britain's King George II proclaims the American colonies to be in a state of "open and avowed rebellion."

1939 The Soviet Union agrees to a non-aggression treaty, the Molotov-Ribbentrop Pact, with Nazi Germany.

CAUGHT IN THE ACTRoyal Flesh

Britain's Prince Harry has been caught on camera doing something embarrassing — again. Celebrity gossip website TMZ on Tuesday posted blurry, low-resolution photographs of the 27-year-old royal cavorting nude with an unidentified woman in a VIP suite in Las Vegas. It isn't clear that the prince was aware pictures were being taken. According to TMZ, he was playing a game of strip pool. (AP)

LEGAL PROCEEDINGSAll Evidence of Marriage to Be Destroyed, Except Suri

The Tom Cruise-Katie Holmes divorce case is closed. Records filed in a New York City court indicate the divorce was finalized Monday. Holmes and Cruise said in July they had reached an agreement, less than two weeks into their divorce case. (AP)

Real-Life DramaMama Did Say, 'Knock You Out'

LL Cool J plays a special agent on "NCIS: Los Angeles," and now he's caught an actual bad guy. The 44-year-old struggled with and subdued a suspected burglar early Wednesday at his home in Los Angeles, police said. He was not hurt. (AP)

NUPTIALS*Poet Laureate of Canada Finds Love With Bro Laureate of Canada

Avril Lavigne and Nickelback frontman Chad Kroeger are getting hitched. The 27-year-old pop singer and 37-year-old rocker became engaged this month after dating for six months. People magazine says Lavigne was introduced to Kroeger in February when they met to co-write a song for Lavigne's next album. (AP)
